Moving Company Marketing: What Actually Works in 2026

Moving company marketing has never had more options — or more ways to waste money. Here's what actually works, at what stage, and why.

Tier 1: The Non-Negotiables

These cost almost nothing and should be in place before you spend a dollar on anything else.

Google Business Profile

When someone searches "movers near me," Google Maps results determine who gets called. Your Google Business Profile is the primary asset that determines your position in those results.

What makes it perform: reviews (volume and average rating), profile completeness (photos, services, hours, description), and consistent engagement (responding to reviews, posting updates).

The operators who dominate local moving searches in most markets didn't get there with a bigger ad budget. They got there by accumulating 80 to 200+ genuine reviews over 2 to 5 years. You can't shortcut this. You can systematize it — and the operators who do compound their advantage every month.

Review Generation System

Not asking for reviews occasionally. Asking every single customer, every single time, with a direct link, within 24 hours of job completion.

At 15% conversion on 20 jobs per month: 3 reviews per month. In 12 months: 36 reviews. In 36 months: 100+ reviews. That review base becomes your most durable competitive moat — it can't be bought or quickly replicated.

Tier 2: Paid Channels That Work

Google Ads (Local Service Ads + Search)

Two types of Google Ads matter for moving companies:

Local Service Ads (LSAs): The "Google Guaranteed" listings that appear above regular ads. You pay per lead, not per click. In the moving category, costs run $20 to $70 per lead. Close rates are typically 25 to 40% because these leads are highly verified and exclusive.

Search Ads: Standard PPC ads. CPCs run $6 to $45 depending on market. More setup and management required. Better for operators who want full control of targeting and budgets.

LSAs are the easier starting point for most operators — lower technical complexity, Google-verified leads, and the trust signal of the "Google Guaranteed" badge.

Pay-Per-Move Partnership

Zero upfront cost. Success fee only on completed moves. For operators who want immediate volume without managing ad campaigns, this is the most accessible channel.

The key: it should be a complement to owned channels (Google, reviews), not a replacement. You want to own your customer acquisition long-term.

Tier 3: Long-Term Compounding Channels

SEO and Content

Takes 6 to 12+ months. Worth starting now. Focus on:

- Location pages for every neighborhood and city in your service area
- Service pages for every move type (local, long-distance, office, storage)
- FAQ content answering questions customers actually search

Realtor Relationships

A realtor who closes 3 to 5 homes per month and refers their clients to you sends 36 to 60 moves per year — with zero ongoing marketing cost after the relationship is established.

Call 10 local realtors this week. Introduce yourself. Offer to do their next client's move at a reduced rate to earn the relationship. 3 consistent realtor relationships can add $30,000 to $70,000 in annual recurring revenue.

Corporate Relocation

Companies that move employees frequently need a trusted local carrier. Once you're on a corporate approved vendor list, moves come to you without marketing effort.

Contact HR departments at major local employers. Offer a dedicated corporate rate with guaranteed service standards.

What Doesn't Work

Lead platforms at full scale: The math doesn't work above small-volume testing. Shared leads at $35 to $80 each with 10 to 18% close rates aren't viable as a primary channel.

Social media for direct bookings: Facebook and Instagram awareness campaigns rarely generate direct moving job bookings. Social is good for brand awareness and referral amplification — not lead generation.

Buying reviews: Beyond being against Google's terms, fake reviews get removed regularly and can trigger a penalty that drops your profile significantly. Build real reviews through real jobs.

The Channel Stack That Works

| Timeline     | Channel                                 | Purpose                                     |
|--------------|-----------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------|
| Immediate    | Google Business Profile + Review system | Foundation — must have before anything else |
| Month 1      | Pay-per-move                            | Immediate volume, zero risk                 |
| Month 2 to 3 | Google LSAs + Search Ads                | Exclusive paid intent                       |
| Month 3 to 6 | Realtor outreach                        | Recurring relationships                     |
| Month 6+     | SEO + Content                           | Long-term organic growth                    |
| Ongoing      | Corporate outreach                      | High-value recurring accounts               |
